

DOING THEIR DUTY

Scores of Barre Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidney's duty. When they fail to do this, the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow: Urinary troubles, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all. Barre people endorse our claim.

L. H. Hooker, 101 Prospect street, Barre, Vt., says: "Since I first used Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, I have recommended them to at least fifty people and have heard everyone who has used them give them a word of praise. I suffered for a long time from kidney complaint and my condition finally became so serious that I was worried. My back ached most of the time and an annoying kidney weakness existed. I used every remedy that was brought to my attention, but without deriving any benefit until I took Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Drown's drug store. At that time I used five boxes and was benefited in a wonderful manner. I have since taken Doan's Kidney Pills off and on, and they have acted as a tonic to my kidneys, keeping these organs in a normal condition."

INCREASED EGG PRODUCTION 100 PERCENT.

It is an old saying that "the proof of the pudding is in the eating." It is another way of saying that the value of any article is never fully realized until it has been carefully tested and compared with others of the same kind. J. H. Russell of River Edge, N. J., has evidently been trying poultry foods. In a recent letter, he says: "The barrel of Page's Perfect Poultry Food came duly to hand; and after giving it a fair trial, I have come to the conclusion that I cannot do without it. It has increased my egg production 100 percent. Enclosed please find money order for one barrel of the food and one barrel of ground green bone and meat."

If you want to know more about this food and the best ways of using it, write to C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., for his booklet, "Profitable Poultry." It will be sent free, postpaid, to anyone mentioning this paper.

HERE IS A REMEDY THAT WILL CURE ECZEMA

"We Prove It"

Why waste time and money experimenting with greasy salves and lotions, trying to drive the eczema germ from underneath the skin, when the Red Cross Pharmacy guarantees ZEMO, a clean liquid preparation for external use, to rid the skin of the germ life that causes the trouble? One application will relieve the itching and oftentimes one bottle is sufficient to cure a minor case of eczema.

In over 2,000 towns and cities in America, the leading druggist has the agency for ZEMO, and he will tell you of the marvelous cures made by this clean, simple treatment. ZEMO is recognized as the cleanest and most popular treatment for eczema, pimples, dandruff and all other forms of skin or scalp affections, whether on infant or grown person. Will you try a bottle on your recommendation?

SURELY BREAKS THE MOST SEVERE COLD

Will Overcome All Distress from a Bad Cold or the Grippe in Just a Few Hours.

The most severe cold will be broken, and all gripe misery ended, after taking a dose of Page's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel all the disagreeable symptoms leaving after the very first dose.

The most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dizziness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, running of the nose, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness, rheumatism pains and other distress vanishes.

Page's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or gripe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end gripe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Page's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

FIRE STARTED MYSTERIOUSLY.

H. Gladstone's Grocery Store in Burlington Wiped Out.

Burlington, Nov. 8.—A destructive fire broke out early yesterday morning at H. Gladstone's grocery store at 189 No. Champlain street and did serious damage before the firemen had the blaze under control.

The building is a two-story wooden structure. In the front part on the ground floor is the Gladstone grocery and in the rear are quarters occupied by the family. There is also a tenement overhead, but the family occupying it lately moved out last week. Mr. Gladstone was preparing to move his family in there this week.

Shortly after five yesterday morning, Mrs. Gladstone was aroused by a noise in the store and told her husband. He did not think much of it until he heard a crackling when he arose and opened the door into the store part, when the smoke and flames burst through. He hastily closed the door, got his wife and three children up and went to box 32 at the corner of Champlain and North streets. The baby was forgotten in the excitement but was remembered in time and was rescued.

The department, responding quickly, found the store a mass of flames. It required the service of two streams about three quarters of an hour to control the fire, and when it was out it was found the grocery stock was destroyed, and the building badly burned, the second story receiving a severe scorching. How the fire originated is a mystery. It started in the store part, probably from an electric wire with the insulation worn off.

Mr. Gladstone values his lost stock and fixtures at from $700 to $800, but there is only $300 insurance. The building is insured for $2,000. It is thought the total loss will be considerably over $1,000. Mr. Gladstone also lost a fur coat and his book accounts. The residence part of the structure was not affected except by water.

People in the vicinity who were up between half past four and five saw nothing unusual about the premises. A curious fact is that the contents of the large oil tank in the store were not touched although the fire burned all around it.

Potato Growing in Vermont.

The results of the potato growing contest instituted by the White River Railroad company is of a very encouraging nature. As shown by the report printed in yesterday's Journal the prize winners were farmers living in the towns of Rochester, Granville and Hancock and the three contestants ranking highest in the list raised, respectively, 467.4, 419.8, and 403 bushels per acre. According to the New England Homestead's figures Vermont's average yield of potatoes per acre was 100 bushels in 1908, 139 bushels in 1909 and 122 bushels in 1910. Maine's average yield this year was 210 bushels per acre. Maine's average is more than four times that of Vermont and the total production is nearly ten times that of our own state.

Maine is famous the country over for potato growing, and the single county of Aroostook ships annually 9,000,000 to 12,000,000 bushels to all parts of the country.

It is worthy of note, therefore, that the first three prize winners in the White River valley produced more than twice the average yield in Maine, where potato growing is a science. It is understood that prizes will be offered again next year and many more farmers will compete.

The Journal does not understand that the soil of Rochester and adjoining towns is of unusual fertility, good above Vermont average, but rather that the yield reported is due to the care taken in securing fertilizer of the proper kind and amount, spraying to prevent rot and rust, and proper cultivation. In other words, the applications of scientific principles would produce the same results in many parts of Vermont. If the same careful treatment applied by these prize winners were generally adopted then we might expect a fourfold increase in the yield per acre. Such an increase would mean, naturally, a largely increased acreage and an addition of tens of thousands of dollars to the wealth of Vermont.

We talk a great deal about developing Vermont in a general way, but here is an opportunity to develop our agricultural resources in a specific manner. There is no reason apparently why Vermont may not develop a business as flourishing as that of Aroostook county, Maine. We need more illustrations of this kind to show our people what they can do if they will. The White River Railroad company is entitled to the thanks of the state for demonstrating what Vermont can do in potato growing. Of course the railroad will benefit by the development of potato growing along its line, but Vermont will be benefited far more. If other corporations would show the same progressive spirit, results would be exceedingly helpful to the people of the state as well as to the companies initiating such contests. All such enterprises help to usher in a better day for Vermont.—Montpelier Journal.

CENTRAL VERMONT RAILWAY.

Good Year in Spite of the Drawbacks Encountered.

It is hardly to be expected that any railway company in Vermont will show very remarkable profits after a year's operation under the existing circumstances. This state is too sparsely populated and does not originate enough traffic within its own borders, either freight or passenger, to pay operating expenses, and if it were not for the through business, roads like the Central Vermont could not live. Railroad-ing is a great problem here in this rural region and will be until the industrial development of the state has put the transportation business on an entirely different basis.

In the meantime, however, the public is demanding just as much of the railroad as if it were making handsome returns on its investment and paying dividends. The railroad service must be up-to-date and supplement the splendid service of the great trunk line connections. Grade crossings must be eliminated at great expense, and new stations built with all modern accessories, and the public service commission constantly whips this and that part of the equipment into a constantly costlier class and insists upon more and more rigid regulations that mean the outlay of more and more money.

When all this is remembered, it is gratifying to Vermonters that wish all the state's business interests well to see how well the Central Vermont railway has done during the past year, as shown by its annual report, and to observe how much of the earnings has gone into works of improvement that will ultimately be to the great benefit of the traveling public. And it is also gratifying to many friends from one end of the line to the other to know that much of the credit for the careful handling of the road's economies and for the excellent public service given by it during the year past is due General Manager George C. Jones. Mr. Jones is not only a practical railway man by reason of experience in many subordinate positions where he learned the details of railway operation, but he has steadfastly shown a disposition to make the road a contributing factor to the material welfare and prosperity of Vermont, both as a business proposition and as a master of public service and public pride. And he is succeeding, to the great satisfaction of the steadily increasing number of friends.—St. Albans Messenger.

A Jammed Camera and a Lioness.

The lioness had taken up her position at the end of a short tongue of land projecting into the danga so that she was partially protected by three slides. The yelling dogs had quickly surrounded her, but she paid little heed to them now. Crouched by the side of a small thorn bush, she watched every move of the horsemen preparing to advance.

Kearton mounted his camera at one side of the scene, selecting his position with care to obtain the best background and general composition. He shifted about two or three times before he was satisfied.

"Of course there's no telling which way she's going to jump," he explained. "But we might as well get the beginning of it right."

Means went first. Slowly he maneuvered toward her for a chance to throw his rope, and the lioness, alert, opened her jaws and snarled at the horseman crouching near.

Closer and closer Means approached. The all at once she charged. Means wheeled and sprang his horse to escape. For the first thirty yards of the race the lioness gained rapidly. Then the bay began to gather headway and slowly forged ahead.

With a quick change of front, the lioness turned and charged the colonel, who was sitting on his horse nearby. Again the lioness gained at first and again the lioness gained at first and again giving up she returned to the thorn bush, where she crouched down low and snarled and growled as before. And all the while Kearton was busy taking pictures of the show.

This second position of hers gave the horseman a better chance. There was now more room in which to get near her by a quick dash past the bush. While Means edged around on the north side, the colonel moved to the south, and by tossing his rope about and shouting he managed to attract and hold her attention. In fact, he nearly succeeded too well, for once she rose to the first spring of the charge and the colonel half wheeled his horse for flight, but the beast sunk back again and glared at him.

Then from behind her Means darted forward on the run, swinging his rope free, round and round his head. Kearton began shouting.

"Wait—the camera's jammed! Wait a bit—she's jammed here!"

But there was no stopping then, and before the lioness knew what he was up to, Means dashed by within a few feet of her and roped her around the neck. But a lioness's neck is short and thick and with a quick, catlike twist, she slipped the noose over her ears.

"Why can't they wait?" complained Kearton. "Somebody tell them to wait till I fix this. It's jammed. It must have got knocked on a rock somewhere. It never acted this way before." And all the while his fingers were busy rapping out the jammed piece of film and loading up afresh.—Guy H. Scull in the November Everybody's.

Magazine Review

Widening the Thanksgiving Circle.

"Home is the natural objective point for every one at the Thanksgiving season," says Margaret E. Sangster in Woman's Home Companion for November. "This is why the stranger far from kinfolk and familiar friends is specially lonely amid general merry-making. Within the circle so that it may include at your dinner table your boy's class who can not cross the continent to be with his own people on the happy day. Let your daughter invite from school, specially lonely amid general merry-making to share Thanksgiving with her."

"Not long ago a man told me that when first he left home to become a clerk in a department store in Philadelphia nothing so touched him as the thoughtful kindness of his employer's wife who never forgot to invite him to her home on holidays, assuring him he was as welcome at her Thanksgiving dinner as if he had been a boy of her own."

"There are ways of widening the circle without necessarily going into the highways and by-ways and bringing in the halt and the blind. If there is among your friends a washer-woman who works hard to feed and clothe her children, a seamstress whose earnings barely cover her needs, if there are orphan children in whom you take an interest, see to it that you share Thanksgiving with them by an unobtrusive way of sending good cheer. I say, intentionally, among your friends. It is a barren life in which sympathy is confined to a single set of people, and unless we have friends among all classes and conditions we are to be pitied for our narrowness."

One Way to Lower the High Cost of Living.

The November American Magazine reprints a letter in its department of "The Pilgrim's Scrip," which was sent to the Massachusetts cost of living commission. It goes as follows:

"It seems to me that the elimination of waste is nearly impossible in households, where there are numerous servants; at last, I have found it so, with only one, and the waste rises in geometrical progression with the number employed. I have now been doing my own cooking for nearly a year, and I feed my family twice as well on about two-thirds the cost. A large part of the savings comes in the economical use of meat. I make a delicious dinner with a few scraps of meat that a cook would give to the dog."

"Then I depend a good deal on soups, which I invent to suit my larder. A few cold baked beans, with a little tomato and a bit of meat on a bone, or a little left-over gravy, make a soup that all eat with much pleasure and it is so nourishing that it goes far to make the dinner."

Most people do not understand how different a soup is when it has simmered a good many hours. The soup that has been boiled fast a couple of hours will taste flat and uninteresting, whereas the same soup five hours later will have such a delicious blend of flavors that all you know is that it is nice, without being able to distinguish the ingredients. Again, it is time that counts.

Cooks waste the coffee and tea horribly. Mix the coffee with cold water the night before, with an eggshell, and bring it to a boil in the morning, and you do not need a great deal for a good cup of coffee. The tea in the kitchen is piled into the teapot and thrown out with but little of the goodness extracted. Another frightful waste is the coal.

Use less than half as much as any girl I ever had, and my stove bakes better. I ever complain of the draught, as she does or did after burning all the goodness out of her coal in the first hour after lighting.

"There is no way that I know of to eliminate waste except by looking after things yourself."

"It's a lioness," said Ulyate. "The dogs have got her bayed. Look out! She's just on the other side of that bush. When I got there I found the colonel seated on his horse, facing the beast and trying to rope her. He didn't even have a knife on him. Why she didn't charge him, I don't know. He couldn't get away over this kind of ground. He told me to call the others and so I did."

When the cowboys arrived from the distant danga, they came threading their way toward us through the brush, leading their horses. A short consultation was held.

"We've got to shift her," said the colonel. "Can't do anything with her here. Bring the firecrackers. Bring—there she goes!"

The lioness had decided the issue and had bolted of her own accord. There was a streak of yellow through the bushes, a scrambling of dogs, wild, frightened cries from the approaching camera porters, and the hunt was on once more.

The beast ran to an open cave at the edge of the plateau and crouched there, facing the dogs. To maneuver the horses was absolutely out of the question, so the lioness had to be shifted again. For upwards of two hours then, by means of the dogs, firecrackers, and lighting the grass, we drove her from one stronghold to another, from crevasse to crevasse, in trying to force her down off the reef.

The sun rose and the heat commenced. The dogs were feeling the strain of the constant baying. One by one they would seek a spot of shade and lie panting there for a while and then return to the fray. Sounder, being weak from distemper, was the first to give out, but he had done his share of the work. Porters were sent back to camp to bring water. Because the ground was bad and the beast was on the defensive, photography was difficult, but Kearton managed to catch small bits of action here and there, with Ulyate standing by him.

The day advanced and the dogs showed signs of tiring fast, yet the lioness still clung to the stronghold of the rocks. Every means at hand to drive her into open had been tried and again without avail. The task began to look hopeless. We had already reached the stage when we saw our resources coming to an end.

"Get a pole," said the colonel, "and we'll poke a noose over her."

"It won't work," said Loveless.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach. A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—the Great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's (New York) complete and full-sized pamphlet, "Liver and Bowels."

"We've tried that often enough to show it won't work."

"Just the same we'll try it again," replied the colonel.

Loveless and just started to hunt for the pole when, without warning, the beast gave a quick, savage snarl, scattered the dogs from in front of her, and, dropping down the face of the reef to the plain below, ran straight for the distant danga.—Guy H. Scull in the November Everybody's.

Do You Know How to Choose a Table?

"A living room naturally has a certain livable look and air of homeliness," says Lucy Abbott Throop in Woman's Home Companion for November, "and this in a way determines the style of table which should be used in this room. No unstable gilt affairs are allowed, no imitations of dainty inlay. Instead, mahogany, oak and other choice woods are used, and also wicker and willow. These should, of course, be in styles to harmonize with the rest of the furniture. Be sure to choose tables that are built on good simple lines and that have a beautiful finish, not the hard, shiny and cheap-looking surface."

"The old-fashioned center table with its carefully arranged gift-books which no one ever read and its fancy lamp on an ornate mat, is out of date. To-day, if we have a large table in the center of the room, it is for use and comfort, and the whole family naturally gathers around it in the evenings."

The chief table in the living room should be large and carefully placed
